

LATE POLITICAL FADS BREEDERS OF ANARCHY SAYS HON. NEIL BROWN

IN ADDRESS TO ROCK COUNTY ATTORNEYS HE WARNS AGAINST TYRANNIES WHICH UNDERMINE CONSTITUTION.

SATIRIZES WISCONSIN

Badger Citizens Will Tire of Being "Guinea Pigs of a Political Laboratory," and May Wander into Wise Government.

Religious of satire, keen in analysis, scholarly in treatment and forcible in language, the address of Hon. Neil Brown of Wausau at the annual banquet of the Rock County Bar Association Monday evening at the Myers hotel, ranks as a masterpiece among the notable speeches with which the association has been favored.

It treated of fads and fashions of politics, of their foolishness, their treacherousness, their emptiness; it treated of the tailors who model these latter day fashions, which the speaker also showed by historical references were as old as the world, and it ridiculed those so-called master tailors, showing them up as the denunciators that they are.

Mr. Brown has something to say on the situation in Wisconsin which has been styled "laboratory for wise political experimentation," and predicted that Badger citizens would become tired of serving as the guinea pigs for such a laboratory. Then they may wander into wise government, he said, and the writer of these political faddists to advance the tyranny of the majority which would undermine our constitutional guarantees, that the speaker attacked as the most insidious of the reformist tendencies.

Mr. Brown was introduced by John Cunningham, president of the association, and the address which was so thoroughly enjoyed by the sixty or more men present is given in part below.

Concerning Fashions.

"The things that hath been, it is that which shall be, and that which is done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun."

"Is there anything whereof it may be said, See this is new? It hath been already of old time which was before us."

"I have chosen this text from the sayings of a wise man of olden time, and the application of it may cover a multitude of sins."

"In our superior masculine way, we have much contempt for the bondage of women to fashion. Frankly, the ten men in this community will be the slightest regard for any tailor-made degrees of fashion. You are wearing the refectory silk hat and the suit of evening clothes, bought when you were married. You change only when your changing waist-band demands it. It requires as much courage in a woman of social position for her to wear an ancient hat or gown, as it does for her to burn a cathedral, or to commit assault and battery on a prime minister. ## LA FOLLETTE TO HEAD G. O. P. STATE TICKET

Milwaukee Free Press Publishes Strange Tale Emanating From Madison This Morning.

In this morning's issue of the Milwaukee Free Press the following weird tale relative to Senator La Follette is published under a Madison date line:

One of the latest political fancies appeared today in the state house when it was reported that Senator La Follette is seriously considering the possibility of resigning his seat in the United States senate and returning to Wisconsin to become a candidate for governor.

The suggestion, of course, bears the earmarks of what is vulgarly known as a pipe dream, but it was discussed seriously by a gathering of politicians known to be friendly to anything and everything that bears the seal of La Follette.

The Alleged Reason.

"Time was," said one of the party, "when the word could be given out and from Milwaukee to Superior and from Green Bay to La Crosse would come quick and effective response. Now all this is changed. The old guard has grown old in fact, and the machine has become silent in its workings. The La Follette craft has become bandaged and the time has arrived when its bottom must be scraped and on its deck placed men of younger blood, men who will bring into the fight with fresh hope that there is something ahead for them."

Short Way to Presidency.

And so it is seriously proposed, and it is said that the senator has seriously considered the proposal, that the shortest way to the presidency is to cut the graveyard of the senate and come back to Wisconsin and start anew the great battle for the progressive cause and new reforms.

The fact that he has alienated many of the progressive leaders in the state, accusing them of treachery to himself in his presidential aspirations, may possibly have tended to make him see that his national aspirations are further than ever from realization, while the political conditions in the state are in need of a moose if the old hold on the state is not to be broken.

But the report that he will retire from the senate to run for governor will not be seriously credited, until it rests on something more definite than capitol gossip.

THE CHAMPS ELYSSES.

The Avenue de Champs Elysses is the pride of Paris and is a favorite weapon with which to strike the visit or dumb with admiration. It is a street which has gotten beyond control and has grown into a park. It is possible to drift so far sideways, while walking along this celebrated thoroughfare, that one has to take a taxi cab to get back into the central part of the street.

The Avenue de Champs begins in the western part of Paris at the Place d'Etat, which is a convention of streets and avenues, twelve in number. For almost a mile the Champs proceeds eastward in an imposing and dignified manner, lined with palaces, ornamented with trees and beautified wherever possible with patches of gravel, for which the French have a passionate fondness. It forms the direct route to the Bois de Boulogne, the 230-acre park of Paris, in which the race courses are situated and the patient observer who camps out on the Champs, will in time see all of Paris and a fair share of the rest of the world pass by.

At the end of this mile the avenue begins to swell like a corporation which has been attached to a hose. It soon becomes circular in shape and then attains a width of almost a quarter of a mile. Following the walks doggedly the traveler is finally shot out into a huge paved square used at one time for the execution of superfluous royalty. Crossing this the pedestrian becomes involved in a tangle of gravel and flower beds known as the Tuilleries, and finally finds himself caught between the two half-moon arms of the Louvre with a four-story stone wall in front.

At this point the stranger gives up the task of following the celebrated avenue and takes up the Jardins des Tuilleries, where he is safe from the Louvre. When he has done this he discovers that the deceitful street has sidestepped him a mile back and had slid peacefully through the center of town under an assumed name as the Rue de Rivoli.

The Avenue de Champs is a three storied street with an underground railroad beneath and aeroplane cabs overhead. It has more trees, taxi cabs and harem skirts than any other street in the world and is so interesting that hundreds of Parisians prefer to leave their lives away under its shade on tiny income than to go to work. The skyling of the Champs was laid out years ago by Baron Haussman with a ruler and its only skyscraper is the Arc de Triomphe, 150 feet high and equipped with an elevator which is used by Parisians as an adventure.

TAKE SODA FOR ACID STOMACH, SOURNESS, GAS

A 10 grain Soda-gem tablet, taken anytime followed by a glass of water will instantly neutralize acidity, absorb gases, and sweeten the stomach thus relieving indigestion without fail. Indigestion does not result from a lack of digestive juices as most folks believe, but from an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which retards digestion and starts food fermentation. Then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon producing a heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate some food, belch up gas or have flatulence, heartburn or nausea.

Any pharmacist can supply a packet of these 10 grain Soda-gem tablets and thousands of stomach sufferers will be able to eat without dread after ridding the digestive organs of excess acid this way, says a noted authority who further states that this Antacid is entirely harmless, being composed of Soda, Magnesia, and Calcium Carbonate U. (Continued from page one) contumely and misrepresentation. Such is the temper of the human mind that tragedy and comedy must ever walk hand in hand. We should be serious, and yet, not too serious. This time should not be utterly given up to our graver thoughts. In my delivings into the tumults of the vanished centuries, I have found many ancient fashions that look familiar. Even feminine militancy shows a face as old as the pyramids.

Old Fashions Renewed.

"None of these, our masculine fashions, though in species or in social institutions, are new. They come and go and seem to change and change again, and were hoary with age when the Saylor of men walked by Galilee. Are we better than our fathers? The people of ancient Syracuse used the judicial recall upon men of the highest character, and made public office the prize of demagogues. The Roman republic also used the judicial recall on magistrates and other officers, and tried those who had incurred popular malice, at the polls, and condemned the offenders to death or banishment.

"Under the empire judicial magistrates were removed at the arbitrary will of the emperor."

"In England the king recalled judges, and it was not until the time of William III that parliament provided that the judicial office should be dependent on the will of the king, but only upon impeachment before parliament.

"These instances and many more illustrate the early worship of majorities.

"In very central Greece, of people who have loved slavery and have unmercifully made slaves of themselves. The tyrant changes, the form of tyranny changes, but the love of slavery does not change. The tyrant may have been a dictator, a conquering general fresh from his triumphs, a popular hero, a king or the worst tyrant of all, the majority, but the manifestations of servility are the same. In all these tyrannies, the will of the tyrant is the standard of right and wrong. We are now engaged in swiftly elevating the masses into tyrants, to thousands, demagogues are dreaming these tyrants, that are not new tyrants, but only the old ones of nations that have perished."

Tyrant of Majorities.

"These early people who made a tyrant of majorities have passed away. Such will be our fate if we set up this tyrant, and destroy the guarantees of our constitution.

"The founders of our republic waged a seven years' battle against England for the preservation of these guarantees. We have unmercifully stricken them through civil war and through all disaster, and we must continue to maintain them, for they are built upon the eternal verities of justice and righteousness. We have made constitutional compacts with each other, that do not permit majorities to wantonly strike down the rights of the citizen.

"Here are some of them:

"No citizen shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law... Every person on American soil, even the stranger and the sojourner, shall be entitled to the equal protection of the laws. Due process of law, as it is now understood, they now protect from majorities, from despotic legislatures, and tyrannical government officers. These fundamentals have come down to us through many centuries of struggle and bloodshed. If we lose them now we shall be unworthy of our great inheritance of liberty equal rights. The recall of judges, and the recall of judicial decisions are twin iniquities that blossomed into flower many centuries before the Christian era, and faded in the fair earth through the middle ages, but shall now prevail against us, will be states to a worse tyranny than any despotism of olden time.

Laboratory Guinea Pigs.

"But a few years ago you held fast to the ideal of simplicity in government. Today you live and move in this state with such freedom as is allowed you under a vast bureaucracy, having as many heads as hydra, ornate and complicated with boards and bureaus and commissions, many-tenacled, all-pervading, far-reaching, covering with espionage everything from barber ships to back yards. And one of the chief of our newer gods in our commonwealth is felicitously phrased as 'A laboratory for wise experiments in legislation.' Tomorrow you will be in the laboratory, and then back to constitutions, from chaos to wise government, from wise government to the anarchy of majorities and then back to constitutions as a refuge from anarchic great political battles will be fought and giant forces be hurled against each other, and when it is over with and the tumult and the shouting dies, you will find that there is nothing more to it than the struggles of the ins to stay in, and the outs to get in."

"Now let all masculine Super-ties, and blustering Egistics, who have erstwhile poured out the vials of contempt on the Fashion God of women, look to it, for they have much to atone for. Gentlemen voters, that do not permit majorities to wantonly strike down the rights of the citizen.

Demagogue Tailors.

"One of our fashionable political tailors can easily establish a new mode of thought, or a novelty in government, by feeding fat the vanity of the people with honeyed words. Hear him weave new vestures for us.

"You are the smartest, the most intelligent people in the world, and the most incorruptible. But if I might be allowed to suggest a fault to beings so exalted, it is that you are too busy to know what evil is being done to you. While you were looking the other way, certain designing persons, political enemies of mine, came along and stole popular government away from you. You can recover your inheritance for you. Believe me, no others but me, etc., etc., etc."

"And now let all masculine Super-

ties, and blustering Egistics, who have erstwhile poured out the vials of contempt on the Fashion God of women, look to it, for they have much to atone for. Gentlemen voters, that do not permit majorities to wantonly strike down the rights of the citizen.

His Stage Setting.

"What a spectacle does one of your master tailors present! A stage hero, gulling his audience from behind the foot-lights, like a music-hall belle; posing, gesturing, declaiming, exchanging bouquets with his organized claque in the galleries; sometimes wooing the tragic Muse with self-praise and driving bathos with press-bureaus to stimulate public interest; the suppression veri, and the Suggestive Falsi; his silly Boswells, the magazine and journalistic muckrakers. Always must our Malvolio the yellow-legs wench, woe Vicia Cottima with his yellow-tasseled stockings, his tongue tangling garments of state, his art of being the pied piper of wise empiric politicians, sed either retrace your steps or wander uncertain into some new laboratory. And through all wanderings, from chaos to wise government, from wise government to the anarchy of majorities and then back to constitutions as a refuge from anarchic great political battles will be fought and giant forces be hurled against each other, and when it is over with and the tumult and the shouting dies, you will find that there is nothing more to it than the struggles of the ins to stay in, and the outs to get in."

"You make a devil-god of him who can flatter you most, deceive you most, and tell you the truth not at all. You worship many idols, having faces of satyr.

Flatterers Often Liars.

"Recently the president, whom history will record as one of our great presidents, urged upon the Senate the repeal of the law which enables our coastwise ships from the payment of the Panama canal tolls. And this, for the reason that such exemption is not only a violation of our treaty obligations with England, but is also clearly a subsidy to American ships that now have a monopoly of the shipping trade between American ports. One of our feeble Robespierres, who happens by some calamitous mischance to represent the state of Kansas in the senate of the United States announces with great gusto that the president is truckling to England and the railroads. A mere suspicion of this baseness is deemed by all demagogues to be fatal to the political fortunes of even the most esteemed citizen. So this poor, venomous creature, is seeking to set our great tyrant of public opinion upon the president. Not because the creature has any convictions of the right and wrong, but that he can excite suspicion against the president. He must believe that he has a clientage somewhere that will respond to his blatant falsehood.

Appeal to Lawyers.

"Gentlemen of the Bar: To our profession has been confided a greater trust than to any other. We should be the great social conserving force. We are not mere advocates in the courts, the yoke-fellows of wrangling suitors and their eulistic wreslings; in the larger forms of public opinion we are the advocates of all the rights of man.

We should stand between the Kid Gleason, the White Sox trainer, uses the "towel method" of calling his players when it is high season for them to be out of bed. Let me explain the "towel method" to the uninitiated reader. The "towel method" is a custom of early days and is said to be never without its effect. Kid Gleason firmly believes that all ball players should be up and doing by 8 o'clock at the latest, and he is always there to see that they are approaching the recumbent and sweetly slumbering form of a player as he lies in bed. Gleason draws forth a wet towel and behabors the form into consciousness. Sometimes in extreme cases he almost behabors them back into unconsciousness. The player is generally up and away without further ado.

No matter how hard they hit him when they get him, Johnny Evers is always sure to live and prosper the more. He has figured actively in one favorite diversion for something like eleven years and in that space of time he has met with many a misfortune and yet he's still on top of the heap and grinning broadly. When Johnny started big league ball in 1903 he was nineteen years old and so little and skinny and nervous that they thought he would last about five short seasons. But he won't die of the marvels of the game until 1910, which proved a mighty unpleasant year for Johnny.

BOXING COMMISSION SHOWS GOOD REPORT

Over Six Thousand Dollars Paid Into State Treasury For Matches Held in State.

Reports compiled this week by the Wisconsin athletic commission, the organization which controls legalized boxing in the state, shows that boxing has brought a total of $6,820 into the Wisconsin treasury. The estimated total for the coming year is placed at two thousand dollars.

Since the Hading law, permitting boxing under strict state supervision, was passed by the legislature, twenty-two clubs have incorporated and a total of seventy-seven exhibitions have been given up to February twenty-second. The state receives five per cent of the gross receipts and in addition, the operating clubs are compelled to pay license, the Bower City Athletic Club paying fifty dollars for their rights, with the maximum price set at three hundred. The revenue derived from this source has been $6,820. The sum allowed annually by the state for expenses of the commission is three thousand dollars, half of which is used for the salary of the secretary, the only paid member of the boxing commission. The remainder of the funds is allowed for incidental expenses but the commission is restricted to three thousand yearly for operation.

As several big matches are being scheduled among the clubs in the state the state's share of the receipts this year will probably reach over twenty thousand dollars. All referees are required to have a license, which costs ten dollars, and are under state supervision. Members of the commission or a representative, are present at all matches and have power to disqualify any boxer, referee or promoter. A case of this was when Packey MacFarland was banned by the boxing board for stealing in a Milwaukee bout with Jack Britton. He was suspended from Wisconsin rings for a period of a year and yesterday with an attorney, appealed to the commission for the lifting of his ban.

At present there are clubs in the following cities: Milwaukee, 4; Oshkosh, Beloit, Madison, Platteville, Sheboygan, Kenosha, Eau Claire, Racine, Superior, Hudson, Appleton, La Crosse and Janesville.

WILL START NEW BOWLING TOURNAMENT AT MILLER'S; BILLIARDS AT SMOKE SHOP

Entrance blanks will be out within a few days for a new bowling tournament for bowlers in the city at Miller's and it is expected that a larger list of entries will be in this contest than the one just completed. Tonight Dr. S. Richards, star bowler in outlaw circuit, and the highest priced big league star who has jumped from organized bowling, will roll Dickerson, who was content to sign a federal contract for a game match for total pins at Miller's tonight.

Dr. Thivierge continues to lead the billiard contest in the tournament at the Smoke Shop with Rich in second place. Standings are as follows:

LAWRENCE COLLEGE TOURNEY OFFICIALS SEND OUT NOTICES

Sections With Various School Teams
Listed Are Given in Instructions—Other Notes.

The tenth annual Wisconsin Intercollegiate High School Basketball Tournament will be held in Appleton under the auspices of the Lawrence College Athletic Association March 26, 27 and 28.

Even for the fact that it is four weeks off, it is interesting to note the rules and regulations governing the tourney at the present time, and also to know the way in which the state is divided into sections for the playing of elimination games. There will be eight teams in the state meet this year.

Interest is even greater this year than it has ever been before. Every school asks for a fighting chance, and they are going to get this chance, say Lawrence authorities.

All of the expenses of the various eight teams are to be paid by the athletic association this year, besides awarding pennants and gold, silver and bronze medals to the individual members of the teams winning first, second and third places.

In dividing the state into sections it was necessary to take many things into consideration: the supposed strength of the teams, the possible arrangement of the various schedules, railroad facilities, etc. It has been decided to admit three teams from the northeastern section, two from the southeastern, two from the northwestern and one from the southwestern section.

The section which is of interest to Janesville enthusiasts is the southwestern one, which includes twenty-three teams. In this division the following schools are included: Burlington, Beaver Dam, Elkhorn, Janesville, Lake Mills, Palmyra, Racine, Waukesha, Wauwausau, West Bend, Beloit, Brodhead, Elgerton, Fort Atkinson, Greenwood, Jefferson, Juneau, Kenosha, Lake Geneva, Milwaukee (Fourth Division), Oconomowoc, Walworth and Waterloo.

This list of teams Janesville, Elkhorn, Racine, Waukesha and Beloit are the strongest competitors, the first team having the decided advantage. Critics pick Janesville and Racine as the two probable quintets to be represented in the state meet from this section. The results of the games between the Wisconsin teams represented at the Beloit tournament this week may determine the relative strength of the teams. Janesville must defeat Elkhorn at the Beloit meet to hold a clear claim.

HIGHS EXPERIENCED HARD DRILL TODAY

Beloit Tournament Hopes Net Old Alumni on Floor at Close or School Today.

The Janesville high school basketball game set the highest obstacle of the year at four o'clock today, when they were set in opposition to their old friends, the Alumni for battle. Coach Curtis is determined to win the title at the Beloit tourney, which starts Friday instead of Saturday, according to Manager Burno at the college. But ten teams were entered up to today, and it is believed, by the Beloit management, that the games will be easily run off in two days, which will bring the finals Saturday.

In an attempt was made today to secure the services of Edler and Korst from Beloit college, former Jonesville high stars, to aid in giving the high a good practice in today's contest.

Koch, Brown and French will also appear in suits. A team composed of Edler and Brown at guards, Falter at center, French and Korst forwards, would be about as good opposition as there could be anywhere, especially at this critical moment. The high five are confident of capturing the tourney.

JAPANESE BOXER WANTS TO APPEAR IN BOUTS
OF LOCAL ATHLETIC CLUB

Promoters of the Bower City Athletic club received an offer from Young Togo, a Japanese boxer of St. Louis, who styles himself as the world's peer of the prize ring, to box in the main bout of the club's next exhibition. Togo issues a challenge to anyone at 122 pounds and is an experienced boxer. His offer is being considered by the directors of the club and at the next show, the fans may see the yellow battler in action against some leading 122 pounder of Wisconsin.

The club expects to hold their next bouts the last of the month. Efforts are being made to match "Winkie" Cox of this city with a good 124 pound boxer of note. Janesville fans would like to see Cox and Ward, the Beloit "bearcat" in action and both perform at about the same weight.

THE APOLLO THEATRE

Shakles, rhains or rope have no terror for Hayes the Hand-Cuff King, now playing at the Apollo Theatre. No matter how he is bound he frees himself in the twinkling of an eye. He gave one of the most marvelous acts last night that has been seen here. He was bound hands, feet and neck together in such a way that an ordinary man would be powerless to move, but Hayes is loose in a second. He is placed in straight jacket, a method used to control crazed people, and cards are ducted to the police station, and the officers placed their best handcuffs on him and swore that no man could break loose. Presto, the handcuff king was a free man and laughed at their attempt. This afternoon he has promised to get out of the fine, strong cells at the county jail, if the demonstration can be arranged. He is indeed marvelous.

The bill at the Apollo also includes two other good acts that are worth seeing. In addition tonight will be shown the feature photo play, "The Auto Bandits of New York."

GENERAL OPINION.

General opinion is that the gathering held on Saturday last by the five hundred residents of Rock county, as a protest against the present high taxes, has awakened the eyes of the whole state to the situation. Non-partisan in nature, the resolutions adopted, the speeches delivered, the stirring letter from former Governor William D. Hoard, all showed the change in sentiment throughout the state.

The Beloit News still insists it was a Stalwart gathering. Those who are blind can not see. They follow the lead set down for them by Assemblyman Rosa, who holds a brief from the tax commission to act as their voluntary defender of some of the laws he helped enact. However the Milwaukee Sentinel takes the news to task for this view, and says:

"As for the reported epileptic state of our usually healthy Beloit contemporary over Mr. Philipp's letters, and the Janesville convention, we doubt if any amount of epistolary effort on Mr. Philipp's part, or Higher Taxulation thereover, would chloroform the taxpayers' revolt in this state, or transmute mass meetings of embattled farmers into grouch-fests of a 'few old stalwarts' collected in a backroom to swap growls over what happened before the flood."

This growing popular demonstration against the socialistic high taxation at Madison, with its tax-eating army of pay roll janizaries, is a great deal wider and deeper than the Bobite or McGovernite trimmers and maimers and patent explainers seem to imagine."

Even the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin comments on the gathering as follows:

"Citizens representing various previous political affiliations united at Janesville, Saturday, in organizing a league to fight against wasteful state government and its inevitable concomitant of high taxes."

"The costly and meddlesome commission system came in for hearty condemnation. Without doubt the abolition of useless commissions is the necessary preliminary to restoration of popular rule and lower taxes. The Janesville meeting, following closely upon that at Darlington, places Rock county in line with Lafayette as alert to the necessity of popular initiative at the coming election to redeem Wisconsin from bureaucratic tax-eaters and unscrupulous office seekers."

"The outlook now is that these county meetings will lead to the sending of delegates to a state convention to further call out and consolidate the independent and indignant producers of the wealth of the state, who are tired of being fleeced by schemers whose closest approach to work seems to occur when they 'work' the people."

The Sentinel, however, goes further and under the caption "Non Political," says:

"If any of you men are working to get some advantage for the republican party or the democratic party, I have nothing to do with you, declared a speaker at the Rock county taxpayers' convention."

"Good!"

Poor Financing.

There was an ancient mariner for three score years and ten. He'd worked upon a submarine until the proud day when He'd view his warlike craft complete.

The government inspectors came and marveled greatly over

The wonderful invention that was moored down by the shore. The old inventor glowed with pride And dreamed of wealth galore.

They sped across the ocean's foam, The men began to think This craft the great problem had solved.

Its wonders made them blink— In fact, it would do anything Required of it but—sink.

The old man was no financier; His purse was not rotund. He'd just enough to float his craft, But not a cent beyond.

You see, he'd been unable to Provide a sinking fund.

THE PENDULUM SWINGS.

In 1912 the national election was turned towards the democratic column by the defection of the so-called progressives, or Roosevelt republicans, from the republican ranks. True, many republicans voted for Wilson, but not enough to have carried the election had it not been for the split in the republican ranks. Since then the politicians have been watching the turn of the wheels of politics to see if they could gain any intimation as to how the next election would go, if there was any thought of consolidation of the two warring republican factions. Keenest among these is Leslie's Weekly, and in summing up the situation in a recent issue they say:

"The New York Tribune gives tables of the vote in Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey and New York showing the revised and complete figures of the vote in those states for 1912, as compared with those for 1912. Except the presidential states, all of which, of course, had canvasses in 1912, these were the only states in which there was a line-up of the voters last November, and in every instance the figures are for the highest man on their respective tickets. These figures make pleasant reading for republicans. In all cases gains were made by the republican party, while the democrats and the progressives lost ground. In the five states here named the republican total in 1912 was 198,598 greater than Taft had a year earlier. The falling off hit the progressives harder than it did the democrats, which was natural, of course.

"In only one of the five states which voted in 1912, Massachusetts, did the republicans lose anything which they previously had, and that is a state in which the republican lead is normally so great that the party can lose many votes without endangering its supremacy in the divisions from year to year. The republicans regained New York and Michigan, which they lost in 1912, and they increased their vote in Maryland and New Jersey. As the division in 1912 will be in every one of the forty-eight states, in all of which representatives in congress, and in some of which state officers, will be chosen the contest will be of far greater importance than was that of a year ago. Moreover, the regular backward swing which, in the off-years, hits the party which holds the presidency, may be relied on to disclose itself. This sort of a disaster hit Cleveland just twenty years ago, in the only year in which the democrats held complete power in the government since Buchanan's election in 1856.

"President Wilson, thus far, has had singular good fortune in striking the republicans in crises in which they were abnormally weak. Let us see if this luck can be relied on in the struggle nine months hence."

So Aylward has announced that he is a candidate for the senate at last. Well, John has a great big surprise waiting for him which will be handed him all wrapped up in a neat little package by the voters.

Wilson is still following out his watching and waiting policy and meanwhile American citizens who are unwise enough to cross the border into Mexico mysteriously disappear.

It is interesting to note that March was formerly the first month of the Roman year. It was considered the first month of the year even in England until the change of style in 1752.

Daring Escape Futility.

For the first time in living memory a convict has escaped from Schleswig fortress, in Russia. While working in the afternoon in the open air the convict scaled the wall with the aid of a rope, and subsequently, though chained, walked all night across the ice of Lake Ladoga toward Petrovsky lighthouse. Early on the following morning the man was discovered by some peasants, and was seized and taken back to Schleswig prison.

RELUCTANT WITNESS CLAIMS HE FEARED THE THIRD DEGREE

T. B. Lewis Says He Bought Drink of Water, Not Liquor, From Evansville Negro Barber.

T. B. Lewis was a reluctant witness in the case of the state against Anthony Richardson, Evansville negro barber, on trial in circuit court this afternoon on the charge of illegal sale of intoxicating liquor.

Lewis was the first witness for the state. He could remember very little concerning the circumstances of securing a shave and a drink at the negro's shop during the month of July last. When District Attorney Dunwiddie refreshed his memory by reading from the justice's docket the case Lewis admitted that he did get a shave and that he did go into the back room to get a shave. He didn't know just what he drank. That was what he testified at the justice court hearing.

In response to cross questioning by Attorney T. S. Nolan, counsel for the defendant, Lewis said he was sure that he drank water from a glass, secured the water from a tin pail and not from a bottle; that he did testify that he didn't know what the beverage was at the justice court hearing because "he said it was beer." Lewis admitted that he was afraid of third degree methods of Evansville police officers. They had threatened him with the "cooler" he said unless he gave evidence damaging to Richardson.

District Attorney Dunwiddie introduced in evidence a government license dated July 1, 1913, and the defendant's attorney conceded that Evansville was "dry" territory.

The Richardson case was the first jury case to be tried at the present court term. It was thought that it would go to the jury late this afternoon.

Four jurors were excused from service by Judge Grimm and another panel of fourteen was drawn. They were summoned by Sheriff Whipple to appear in court at ten-thirty tomorrow.

DECIDES IN FAVOR OF SUGAR COMPANY

Judge Grimm Orders Judgment Against M. F. Barringer for Costs in Beet Pulp Case.

In his decision filed in the clerk of the court's office on Monday, Judge George Grimm of the circuit court ordered judgment dismissing the action with costs in favor of the defendant in the case of M. F. Barringer of Philadelphia who was suing the Rock County Sugar company for a considerable sum, about $802. The suit arose out of a contract between Barringer and the local factor, made in 1906, and which provided for the disposal of such quantities of the beet pulp of the sugar factory as could not be sold directly to farmers and consumers here in the west. Barringer could not fill orders which he had contracted to fill on the strength of his agreement with the sugar concern and was forced to make good the losses of his customers.

Judge Grimm says in his conclusion, "that under the terms of the contract the defendant might lawfully sell for its western market and for the purposes of introducing the pulp as feed and other means, so much of the output of 1906 and at such times as it might elect; that the right of the plaintiff to sell off the pulp was limited to such amount of the 1906 output as the defendant did not elect to sell under the reservation; and that the defendant might and did lawfully refuse to fill orders in excess of said amount."

In the case of Otto Roney against the Sugar company, Judge Grimm found for the plaintiff, giving him a judgment of $350.70 with interest since the date of the commencement of the action, March 11, 1913. The action arose out of the sugar company's refusal to receive beets grown by the plaintiff on the grounds that they were unfit for use, being frozen, although the plaintiff had been ready for early delivery and had on advice of the company taken ordinary precautions to banish and cover the beets to protect them from the weather.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

MOLLY, the little stenographer lady, had just returned from her first visit to a new friend of hers who is a great traveller. We had all been much interested in this friendship as we always are in any good thing that comes to one of us, and we wanted to hear all about the visit.

"I suppose her home is full of beautiful things from all over the world," said the Lady-Who-Always-Knows-Somehow, "she and her husband are such great travellers."

Molly considered. "No," she decided, "there were a few things from abroad, but not many."

"I'm," said the Author-Man's wife, "I should think they'd like to have something to show for it," flashed Molly. "Who said they had it?" "They've got plenty to show for it, it isn't just bric-a-brac and souvenirs in their house. It's in their minds. They've furnished their minds, that's what they've done, and they're the best furnished minds I ever visited."

We all laughed at Molly of course, but after the laugh was over there came a moment of silence, and I suspect we were all asking ourselves the same question, "How is my mind furnished?"

It's quite an interesting and rather startling question, isn't it?

How are our minds furnished? What pictures and possibilities that calls up!

I can see a mind full of the cheap and trashy tawdry ideals. The table is a veneered imitation of some expensive wood, the wall paper is too bright, and several of the chairs in which strength was sacrificed to showiness are beginning to drop to pieces.

Again I see a mind crowded with an unbeautiful accumulation of narrow notions and unreasoning dispositions and outworn prejudices like those house furnished in that unfortunate Victorian period when those ornate, ridiculous and entirely unjustifiable atrocities of marble and horsehair and black walnut were the things of the world.

And again I see a mind cluttered with the cheap bric-a-brac of useless accomplishments and superficial learning. There are too many meaningless pictures on the walls, too many cheap books on the table, too much useless and unbeautiful bric-a-brac all over the room.

Let's have some pleasanter pictures, you say? Very well, then. I see a mind well furnished with the plain, durable furniture of good common sense, solid ambitions and intelligent thoughts. Everything is simple and inexpensive, but beautiful in its simplicity and its perfect adaptation for its use.

Again, I see a mind in which there are many beautiful things, both old and new. There is some fine old furniture of the age of artistic lines and stately simplicity, and there are some new things with the beauty of this age, and added to them the outlooks and hopes and visions of the present.

How is your mind furnished?

You cannot, perhaps, choose just how your home of boards or bricks shall be furnished, but you can furnish your mind just as you will. And you can change it too, and refurbish it and make it more beautiful and livable every day of your life.

Look upon yourself and decide. How is your mind furnished? Is it the kind of mind people like to visit? Is it the kind of mind that is pleasant to live in? In short, are you satisfied with it?

MISSOURI WOMEN SAY
THEY WILL WIN VOTECirculating Petition Throughout
State to Win Ballot Privilege—
Confident of Victory.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 3.—Within a few days, according to Mrs. Walter Miller, president of the Missouri Equal Suffrage Association, the 23,000 signatures necessary on petitions for a vote on an equal suffrage amendment to the constitution, will have been secured. Nearly half of that number had been secured on January 28 after several weeks of work throughout the state. Mrs. Miller today explained the "Missouri" reason for woman suffrage, the desire of the women to participate in and share the labors of government, and the mere seeking of more influence and power. She said Missouri will be the next "suffrage state."

"We are not entering the work as a fad or fad," said Mrs. Miller. Every worker from the state president to a ward captain is a voluntary worker. The members of the organization are students of social life. They see that modern conditions are leaving some women with too much leisure while others have none. We cannot spend our time in bridge and parties or gossip. Yet modern improvements have lightened our housework and other duties. We must have something to do. On the other hand, we see women who never know a moment's rest. We believe that much or all of this is due to social conditions, which we propose to help correct. We want to help to make sweat shops impossible and child labor unknown.

"Every argument raised against equal suffrage has been raised against every step which has been made in woman's progress. We expect to show by all our conduct in attempting to secure the ballot that we can use it wisely when we get it. The number of college women in our association is an example of the type of women in the movement."

The organization of a Woman Suffrage Party is being made all over the state in anticipation of the submission of the initiative. The party will be non-political and non-dues paying. There will be county and township chairmen, ward and precinct captains, in the same way as the organization has been perfected already and its securing signatures to the initiative petitions by a house to house canvas. Elsewhere they are planning "whirlwind" campaigns for one day in which they will concentrate their efforts.

When the petition has been accepted by the secretary of state and officially submitted to the people the real work will begin. Most of the planning is being directed toward the big campaign because the women are sure that they can get enough signatures to have the initiative submitted. They say that they are having little trouble getting men to sign, because to sign does not mean that the person is in favor of woman's suffrage but it is in favor of having it brought to a vote.

Before frying the breakfast bacon, cut off the rind and dip in flour; then fry or grill quickly. This prevents the fat from running and gives the bacon a better flavor.

ERUPTION ALL OVER CHILD'S BODY

Began With Small Red Spots, Cried
Almost Day and Night. Used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Well in One Week.

R. F. D. No. 2, Jackson, Mo.—"Our daughter who is ten months old was suffering from an eruption all over the body. In the beginning they were small red spots and afterwards turned to bloody sores. We tried all sorts of ointments but they did not procure any relief for our child. She had no rest day or night and we tried everything to procure relief for our baby.

She cried almost day and night and we scarcely could touch her, because she was covered with sores from head to foot.

"We had heard about the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and made a trial with them and after using the remedies, that is to say, the soap and the ointment, only a few days passed and our child could sleep well and after one week she was totally well."

APOLLO CLUB CLOSES SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Miss Anita Carranza and Company Entertained Large Crowd at Library Hall Monday Evening.

The Apollo Club closed another successful season last evening, at the Library Hall, when Miss Anita Carranza, coloratura soprano, Irene Stoltovsky, violinist, and Mrs. Irene Stoltovsky, accompanist, composed the list of entertainers for the final concert. The season has been unusually successful, many of the numbers being of a higher class than at any previous outlays.

Miss Anita Carranza has a voice full of humor and despair, and her beautiful runs and rapid passages brought forth creditable applause from the club members. The fact that she is a niece of General Carranza, commander of the rebel forces in the Mexican situation, made her all the more popular with the audience. She reached the high tones rich and sweet, and controlled her voice with decided ease. She wore a pleasant smile on appearing, and carried it with her throughout the evening.

Miss Irene Stoltovsky, violinist, has a wonderful talent for handling the bow. She has acquired the art of playing with ease, and the difficult selections which she rendered, were full of expression, and with so many changes, that an alert and experienced musician only could have mastered them.

Miss Prudence Neff, pianist, was placed on the program at a late hour in the day, due to the absence of Rose Blackmore, who was unable to make the trip to this city. Miss Neff is declared to be Miss Blackmore's equal.

She displayed great skill at the keys, in presenting Liszt's Rigoletto.

The accompanist, Miss Gladys Dreyer, spent Sunday in Brodhead the guest of Florence Skinner.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to woman kind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

Coming to the jog in the broad macadam, they were striking off into the narrow road that led to the quaint old mill, long since abandoned in the forest glade beyond, when their attention was drawn to a motor car, which was slowing down for the turn into Sara's domain. A cloud of dust swam in the air far behind the machine.

A bare-headed man on the seat beside the driver waved his hand to them, and two women in the tonneau bowed gravely. Both Hetty and Booth flushed uncomfortably, and hesitated in their progress up the forest road.

The man was Leslie Wrangler, his mother and sister were in the back seat of the touring car.

"Why—why, it was Leslie," cried Booth, looking over his shoulder at the rapidly receding car. "Shall we turn back, Miss Castleton?"

"No," she cried instantly, with something like impatience in her voice. "And spoil our walk?" she added in the next breath, adding a nervous little laugh.

"It seems rather—" he began dubiously.

"Oh, let us have our day," she cried sharply, and led the way into the by-road.

They came, in the course of a quarter of an hour, to the bridge over the

the "rocks" and "rotten" timbers to the great beam that protruded from the shattered foundations of the mill. The rickety old wheel, weather-beaten and sad, rose above them and threatened to topple over if they so much as touched its flimsy supports.

He did not release her hand after drawing her up beside him.

"You must know that I love you," he said simply.

She made no response. Her hand lay limp in his. She was staring straight before her.

"You do know it, don't you?" he went on.

"—God knows I don't want you to love me. I never meant that you should—" she was saying, as if to herself.

"I suppose it's hopeless," he said dumbly, as her voice trailed off in a whisper.

"Yes, it is utterly hopeless," she said, and she was white to the lips.

"—I sha'n't say anything more," said he. "Of course, I understand how it is. There's some one else, only I want you to know that I love you with all my soul, Hetty. I—I don't see how I'm going to get on without you. But I—I won't distress you."

"There isn't anyone else, Brandon," she said in a very low voice. Her fingers tightened on his in a sort of desperation. "I know what you are thinking. It isn't Leslie. It never can be Leslie."

"Then—then—" he stammered, the blood surging back into his heart—"there may be a chance—"

"No, no!" she cried, almost vehemently. "I can't let you go on hoping, it is wrong—so terribly wrong. You must forget me. You must—"

He seized her other hand and held them both firmly, masterfully.

"See here, my—look at me, dearest!

"What is wrong? Tell me! You are unhappy. Don't be afraid to tell me. You—do love me?"

"S—trew a long breath through her half-closed lips. Her eyes darkened with pain.

"No. I don't love you. Oh, I am sorry to have given you—"

He was almost radiant. "Tell me the truth," he cried triumphantly. "Don't hold anything back, darling. If there is anything troubling you, let me shoulder it. I can—I will do anything in the world for you. Listen: I know there's a mystery somewhere. I have felt it about you always. I have seen it in your eyes, I have always sensed it stealing over me when I'm with you—this strange, bewildering atmosphere of—"

"Hush! You must not say anything more," she cried out. "I cannot love you. There is nothing more to be said."

"But I know it now. You do love me. I could shout it to—" The miserable, whipped expression in her eyes checked this outburst. He was struck by it, even dismayed. "My dearest one, my love," he said, with infinite tenderness, "what is it? Tell me?"

He drew her to him. His arm went about her shoulders. The final thrill of ecstasy bounded through his veins. The feel of her! The wonderful, subtle, feminine feel of her! His heart reeled in a new and vast whirl of intoxication.

She sat there very still and unresisting, her hand to her lips, uttering no word, scarcely breathing. He waited. He gave her time. After a little while her fingers strayed to the crown of her limp, rakish panama. They found the single hatpin and drew it out. He smiled as he pushed the hat away and then pressed her dark little head against his breast. Her blue eyes were swimming.

"Just this once, just this once," she murmured with a sob in her voice. Her hand stole upward and caressed his brown cheek and throat. Tears of joy started in his eyes—tears of exquisite delight.

"Good God, Hetty, I—I can't do without you," he whispered, shaken by his passion. "Nothing can come between us. I must have you always like this."

"Che-sara, sara," she sighed, like the breath of the summer wind as it sings in the trees.

The minutes passed and, neither spoke. His rapt gaze hung upon the glossy crown that pressed against him so gently. He could not see her eyes, but somehow he felt they were tightly shut, as if in pain.

"I love you, Hetty. Nothing can matter," he whispered at last. "Tell me what it is."

She lifted her head and gently withdrew herself from his embrace. He did not oppose her, noting the serious, almost somber look in her eyes as she turned to regard him steadfastly, an unwavering integrity of purpose in their depths.

"No," he exclaimed. "I've got to go on with it now, Hetty. I didn't intend to, but—come, let us go up and sit on that familiar old log in the shade of the mill. You must, dear!"

She suffered him to lead her up the steep bank beyond and through the rocks and rotten timbers to the great beam that protruded from the shattered foundations of the mill. The rickety old wheel, weather-beaten and sad, rose above them and threatened to topple over if they so much as touched its flimsy supports.

He started, so much in surprise as at the abruptness with which she made the announcement.

"I have been sure of it, dear, from the beginning," he said quietly.

Then her tongue was loosened. The words rushed upon her lips. "I was Hawkrift's model for six months.

I posed for all those studies, and for the big canvas in the academy. It was either that or starvation. Oh, you will hate me—you must hate me."

He laid his hand on her hair, a calm smile on his lips. "I can't love and hate at the same time," he said.

"There was nothing wrong in what you did for Hawkrift. I am a painter, you know. I understand. Does—does Mrs. Wrangler know all this?"

"Yes—everything. She knows and understands. She is an angel, Brandon, an angel from heaven. But," she burst forth, "I am not altogether a sham. I am the daughter of Colonel Castleton, and I am cousin of all the Murgatroyds—the poor relation. It isn't as if I were the scum of the earth, is it? I am a Castleton. My father comes of a noble family. And, Brandon, the only thing I've ever done in my life that I am really ashamed of is the deception I practiced on you when you brought that magazine to me and faced me with it. I did not tell you. I simply let you believe I was not the—the person you thought I was. But I deceived you."

"No, you did not deceive me," he said gently. "I read the truth in your dear eyes."

"There are other things, too. I shall not speak of them, except to repeat that I have not done anything else in my life that I should be ashamed of." Her eyes were burning with earnestness. He could not but understand what she meant.

Again he stroked her hair. "I am sure of that," he said.

"My mother was Kitty Glynn, the actress. My father, a younger son, fell in love with her. They were married against the wishes of his father, who cut him off. He was in the service, and he was brave enough to stick.

They went to one of the South African garrisons, and I was born there.

Then to India. Then back to London, where an aunt had died, leaving my father quite a "comfortable" fortune.

But his old friends would have nothing to do with him. He had lived well, he had made life a hell for my mother in those frontier posts.

He deserted us, in the end, after he had squandered the fortune. My mother made no effort to compel him to provide for her or for me. She was proud. She was hurt. Today he is in India, still in the service, a martinet with a record for bravery on the field of battle that cannot be taken from him, no matter what else may befall. I hear from him once or twice a year. That is all I can tell you about him. My mother died three years ago, after two years of invalidism. During those years I tried to repay her for the sacrifice she had made in giving me the education—the—" She choked up for a second, and then went bravely on. "Her old manager made a place for me in one of his companies. I took my mother's name, Hetty Glynn, and—well, for a season and a half I was in the chorus. I could not stay there. I could not," she repeated with a shudder. "I gave it up after my mother's death. I was fairly well equipped for work as a children's governess, so I engaged myself to—"

She jerked her hands away, and held them clenched against her breast.

"No! I cannot. It is impossible, Brandon. If I loved you less than I do, I might say yes, but—no, it is impossible."

Going in for Fruit.

The fad of running fruit farms is daily gaining popularity among English women, says the Daily Mail, and many prominent women are taking up the study and setting out orchards and groves of fruit.

Two negroes were discussing their young sons, and the first declared he intended to make his hopeful an astronomer. "It's a fine job," he concluded.

"Yas," drawled the other. "Yoh done tol' me dat afore, but what's he gwine to do in de daytime?"

The small man was feeling uncomfortable crushed in the crowded street car when a brilliant inspiration flashed into his head.

He turned to the big man near him.

"I hope you don't object to riding beside a smallpox patient, do you?" he inquired as the car slowed down at the stopping place.

"No; but some of the other passengers might," replied the big man, and, taking him by the shoulders, he threw the schemer out into the road.
